O stars, all silvery bright, set on that deep, cilli Biars that are watching over us both the long night through.

A BIT OF A FLIRTATION.

The sea was as wonderfully lovely, this bleak Kovember day, as in the height of its summer beauty.

But there were row people to look upon it now. Along the deserted steamboat wharf, at which the summer shamed, those were was looking at the splender of color that flosted the western sky; they were only gazing at each other.

"I think shows a very silly thing," the girt was saying, with a contemphants smile. "As for me, if I loved anyone."

"I they day one."
